great speech to-day in defence of himself and his public reputation—and yet I dare hardly trust myself to speak of it under the excitement which it has created in my mind. I have read specimens of invective, both in the original languages and in translations from Demosthenes and Cicero-1 have read the invectives of Burke and Sheridan and other read the invectives of Burke and Sheridan and other orators in the British Parliament and elsewhere, but I think that there never was delivered in this country or in Europe anything at all approaching that of Mr. Webster to day, under the influence of which I am still laboring. Since and during the delivery I have felt a sensation of awe as I have felt when a magnificent thunder storm passed over me. I have almost felt the lightning's wing as it shot past me, followed instantaneously by the thunder crash, and I have felt swed by the majesty of the exhibition, while I have felicited myself on being fortunate while I have felicited myself on being fortunate enough to be in the center of the war of elements. Some people will be apt to say that the punishont was too severe, the vengeance too summary, nich Mr. Weester inflicted on his adversaries to day. I acknowledge that it was severe—dreafully so—but we must not forget the provocation. We must weigh the punishment in the scale against the effence that provoked the retribution.

For four long years Mr. WEBSTER with his Treaty, has been made the butt of Loco Foco ribaldry.

As a Western Loco Foco Senator informed me to-As a Western Loco Foco Senator informed me today, it was a common practice among their party, when they grew wearied in heaping charges upon the Whigs, and when their assertions were contradicted, to launch out against Mr. Webster, and the Ashburton Treaty. This was sure to bring down the plaudits of every loafer who was sober enough to clap his hands. Every bar-room and groggery resounded with malediction upon Gen. Harrison's Secretary of State, till the foul-mouthed libelers began actually, from of repeating them, to believe their own falsehoods. The pigmy Politicians have geaded the giant into action, and with one stamp of his foot he has crushed the whole brood into pulverized non-entity—if your readers will allow me to cload gathered itself over his face. A thunder storm ensued seldom equaled in Northern climates. The dark cloud of vengeance hung upon his brow to-day, and the forked lightnings played from beneath.—

There was one dreadful flash and thunder clap, which shivered every thing into atoms—rear after roar followed flash after flash. The first had laid its Southern Loco Foco remarked that when Mr. A Southern Loco Foco remarked that when art. WEBSTER sat down be looked like nothing so much as a wild beast who had grown tired lapping blood, and ceased from weariness, rather than from pity. Some may think me extravagant in my description, but I have looked it over coolly and I do not tion, but I have looked it over cooling and the hot think that I exaggerate. Some propose to erect a monument to Messrs. Dickinson and Ingersott, before they sink clean from the memory of man. But that is useless. Mr. Webster has to day made them immortal. While the severest piece of invec-tive eloquence on record is read, the object of that

Some members of Congress think that Mr. Wes-ster ought not to have gone so far, being a great Constitutional Lawyer, for the eighth article of the mendments to the Constitution of the U. States pro-vides that there shall not be "cruel and proposed vides that there shall not be "cruel and unusual punishments inflicted." All will acknowledge that the punishment was severe. As it has no parallel it I gave you as good a sketch of the speech as I

I gave you as good a sketch of the speech as I could by the evening mail. The Senate did not adjourn till near four, and I had to take dinner and finish the sketch by five o'clock. What I sent you yesterday and to-day will give you an idea of the speech, but you should republish it as soon as you see an authentic copy. It is the most successful self vindication on record.

I gave you some of his expressions about Mr. Ingressoll but had not time to give you some he used about Mr. Dickinson. He asked the honorable Member from New-York whether it was fair, just Member from New-York whether it was fair, just and honorable to embody in his printed speech what be (Mr. Webster) had pronounced at the time wholly false—an ebullition, said he, foul and black-mouthed as any thing ever ejected from the mouth of any thing standing on two legs! And yet, he said, that Senator Dickinson had franked these speeches of his, containing Mr. Ingersoll's libel, by the thousand. He would venture to say that there were enough of them sent into Broome county to fill a barn and of them sent into Broome county to fin a barn and mighty poor fodder at that, said he.

He said it was no pleasure for him to use such language, but his public character had been attacked. That character had been earned by thirty years hard toil here. It was dear to him as his life; and come from what quarter the attack may, said he, that reputation shall not be stricken down. Till life is actionizabled. I defend it nguished, I defend it. He complained that the conduct of Mr. Dickinson,

He complained that the conduct of Mr. Dickinson, in publishing a slander from the other House, after it was publicly pronounced a falsehood, was not exactly in accordance with Senatorial bearing.

Two or three times Mr. Wedster remarked that he would keep his temper—but the sneer would creep over his features. Anybody who could have got a Daguerreotype likeness of his face while he was ridiculing Mr. Ingersoll's veneration for Massachusetts, would have made a fortune by it.

It was a new field for Wedster and he has shown himself fully master of it. He has been en shown himself fully master of it. He has been en gaged in great contests of intellect, where he felt that he grappled with men worthy of his greatest exertions—but here he stood upon a high point, and seemed to look down with contempt upon the victims of his withering invective.

seemed to look down with contempt upon the victims of his withering invective.

I doubt whether the play is over. Senator DickIsson has the floor for to-morrow. He is fool-hardy enough to provoke still farther the anger of the roused lion. Mr. Webster will probably reply again. If Mr. Allen replies to Mr. Webster there will be little left of him in the encounter.—
Most of the Senators are felicitating themselves that they were not the objects of his wrath to day. Most of the Senators are including the dependent that they were not the objects of his wrath to-day. They say they have seen in tropical climates six or eight flashes of lightning strike a poor asimal which was le'd ur stiff by the first, and they don't want to have any practical experience of the operation.

Danker, Wanster is a great, big Electrical Machine. The masticup he has got in barrooms and chine. The position he has got in bar-rooms and other manufactories of Loco Focoism, has excited the electricity. The machine is now fully charged.

Any one who touches it will get a shock.
I believe I made a mistake about Mr. Levin's amendment to the rifle bill to day, in the House. It was that the Regiment should guard only Native emigrants to Oregen, in place of officering it with Vities. He or his amendment, however, is of little out. I understand that he raised quite a laugh himself to day by stating that Benedict Aris a foreigner! This also is of little account. The Cumberland Road Bill was rejected to day Pennsylvania Legislature-Passage of the Revenue Bill Taxing Coal-Right of Way, &c. Correspondence of The Tribune.

HARRISBURG, April 6, 1846. Though but entering upon Spring, we are here enjoying the warmest of a Summer's sun, much to the annoyance of dignified, if not all active legislators. A large proportion of the members of the present Legislature are farmers. Their anxiety to return to the business of the sesson will scarcely permit them to tarry at the Capital until disposition is made of the important public bills now pending.

The Revenue Bill, to which I referred in my last, finally passed the House on Saturday by a vote of 42 to 40. It is reculiarly obnoxious in many of its provisions to many sections of the State; but if made a law will no doubt, for a time, bring a large additional amount into the Treasury, probably five handred thousand dollars annually. Whether our coal will bear the tax imposed upon it by this bill is extremely doubtful. Many are ready to predict that this system of taxation will prove in the highest degree suicidal.

Mr. BIGLER reported a bill early in the Session,

Mr. BIGLER reported a bill early in the Session, a synopsis of which you have already published, which some think will be substituted in the Senate for that which has passed the House.

The Senate have the Appropriation bill under consideration. The only important amendment made, is a reduction of the School Appropriation to $150,000. The House had appropriated $200,000. S150,000. The House and appropriated 250,000. It is to be hoped that Pennsylvania, after having acted upon a work which she was too tardy in commencing—that of educating her sons and daughters, be they rich or poor—will not now take a retrograde step. Financial embarrassment will not excuse such a movement. Prudent forecast,—enlighting the statement of the property of same ened Statesmanship, must see the impolicy of sap-ping up the only true fountain of wealth, for the sake ping up the only true fountain of weath, for the sake of temporary relief or gain. For the honor of the State, let it not go forth to the world, that Pennsylvania, after having tried, and experienced the innumerable benefits flowing from the establishment of a system of Common School Education, is now ready to halt and undo what wise and sagacious men spent veers to accommish. men spent years to accomplish.

A bill has passed both Houses for the incorporation of a Company to construct a tri-partite wire suspension bridge over the Allegheny and Monon-gahela Rivers at Pittsburgh. It is said that the stock requisite, will be subscribed in due time, and the ork be put under contract for construction. It is work be put under contract for construction. It is understood that Mr. J. A. Roebling is to be the architect. If completed according to plan, this will be one of the most magnificent structures in the country. Mr. Roebling is an enterprising German, who has been but a few years in the United States. Coming with a number of his countrymen, he settled with them in a thriving little village called Saxonburg, in Butler county. Here he established an extensive manufactory for wire ropes. These ropes have been manuscory for which personal number of our railroads and bave given the maker a wide-spread reputation. Mr. R. has recently completed the Aqueduct across the Allegheny at Pittsburgh, and built a fine bridge over the Monongahela. He is now here making proposals for building a bridge across the Susquepanns. I understand. His work gives entire satisfanns. hanns, I understand. His work gives entire satis

Railroads, nothing but Railroads, excites interest or attention here. The great bill of the Session that granting the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company resounded with malediction upon Gen. Harrison's Secretary of State, till the foul-mouthed libelers began actually, from oft repeating them, to believe their own falsehoods. The pigmy Politicians have goaded the giant into action, and with one stamp of his foot he has crushed the whole brood into pulverized non-cutity—if your readers will allow me to use that expression. Who can blame him for such a crushing retribution?

He seemed determined to make no half way work of the matter. He had lifted his arm of vengeance, and it must atterly annihilate whatever it fell upon. The sun of his intellect had been looking upon the mists and vapors of political degradation, and a cload gathered itself over his face. A thunder storm that the control of the matter is a construct a portion of their road through Pennsylvania in the direction from Baltimore to Pittsburg, was at length got up in the House to-day by a vote of 45 to 40. I give you the numbers, for all votes here are serutinized with the greatest interest. This passed once, but as it was voted upon as an amendment to an amendment, it came before the House again, being now the amendment as amended. Against it the friends of the bill are victims out crushed and broken monuments of its fary, succeeding ones played around the wreck only lighting up the rules that their predecessor had will no doubt be said on the subject, but talking will no doubt be said on the subject, but talking will

The first squall that struck the vessel dismantled ber, leaving her a helpless wreck, but still the lightings of heaven danced round it, and the war of the tempest made music through the wide-spread desolation.

When the tempest ceased, the cahoes played round the dome of the Capitol and wailed a requiem over the killed and wounded in the march of death.

Next to the 'Right of Way' bill, the most im portant question undisposed of is that of the con-struction of an out-let lock on the Delaware Division at wells a pushed through the Senate, and is now awaiting its doom in the House. Beside its advocates on the floor of the Legislature, Hon. Samuel D. Ingham and other distinguished gentlemen are here, warmly enlisted in its favor.

Harrisburgh is not so gay now as at an earlier period of the session, perhaps, but the press of business is greatly increased. Borers, for and against a dozen different bills, throng the Legislative halls, and may be seen at almost every corner in secret consultation. Many are destined to reap a disappointment they are but little expecting.

The Erie Railroad. New York April 7th, 1846.

Horace Green, Esq.—In this morning's Tribune in an article, "The Eric Railroad", you evince a great desire to oblige "our own folks in Sullivan Co." I doubt not your sincerity, and therefore asks of you to correct the erroneous impressions your remarks are calculated to give. As to the question between "our own folks in Sullivan Co." and the Railroad Co, they do not ask them to go to Monticello, but that they locate through the Co. according to the intentions of the Legislature in granting the original charter, and for carrying out which they received so large a bonus. Farthermore, they say, if you do not obtain as favorable grade through Sullivan Co. as you now have in Rockland and Orange, and as you can obtain through Delaware, Broome, and the three most Western counties, to be determined by three disinterested Commissioners, then we withdraw all opposition.—
